New England artist Paul George was born in Cambridge, Massachusetts and has a BS degree from Northeastern University. He studied at the MFA School in Boston as well as with nationally known watercolor artists. He is a signature member of the National Watercolor Society as well as the Cape Cod, North Shore, Academic Artists, Rockport and New England Watercolor Societies. His work has been published in several magazines and he has been teaching watercolor workshops for many years. Paul's workshop is loaded with great information and is very motivating for both the beginner and the experienced painter. His focus is to teach you how to approach any subject and execute a good painting. You'll begin with an in-depth look at values and how to use them to simplify, design and improve your painting. Next we will move into the exciting world of color and explore the reasons why watercolor can make it come alive. Design of your painting is always an important factor and you will learn how to simplify, understand and use it to add power and punch to your work. Paul will do a demo and talk and will give personal attention to each student.

Paul will teach landscape painting for 3 days and flowers for 2 days. You may sign up for either or both. Bring several photos to work from along with your usual painting supplies. Don't forget your lunch!

Enclose a SASE with your registration for a materials list.
